9	Yes: I am the Fleet Safety Champion; however, our Sr. Vice President Human Resources (reports directly to CEO) provides the muscle for our fleet safety program and is very active in the program. In 2010 he had me write a position paper on the subject to include attaching all information supporting my position and recommendations. He set the bar to what the Company's fleet safety program will be in 2011. During 2011, I am to identify best practices and measurements used by other companies and compare to (our) fleet safety program. Our primary interest is with non-commercial motor vehicles, did we set the bar high enough or do we need to adjust it. I am looking forward to the networking opportunity NETS provides.	Yes
10	Yes: There is a Fleet Safety Champion in each country in which we operate. It varies from country to country but it is usually a member of the Management Committee.	ECM

16	Yes: Business unit EHS leader	No
17	Yes: Fleet safety lead	No
18	Yes: While it is an interesting approach, we currently don't have a senior champion. Each business leader holds driving safety responsibility.	No

22	No: We recognize this as a shortfall and are working on it.	Working on getting one
23	No, not yet. The safety program here is just now gaining significant traction and is becoming more of a 'buzz' with the exec. leadership. My expectation is that someone will have had a significant experience with driver safety that will lend itself to the passion that's really needed to champion this type of program.
24	No, but we have identified an executive leader who would like to be our champion. We are working on building this out right now.	Working on getting one
25	No, but I am working on getting one, and it will be from the Executive Team.	Working on getting one
26	No, however, one departmental organization does have single point of contact who acts like a fleet safety "guru."
27	No Champion for our program up to this point. We recognize this as a shortfall and are working on it.	Working on getting one
